OCTOBER 2026 EDITION

CORRECT AS OF 26 OCT 2026

BEFORE YOU START

How to read this.

Cruelty-free & vegan

Certified cruelty-free, and nothing from animals across the whole range.

Cruelty-free

Certified cruelty-free. Vegan varies by product, so check the label.

Owner isn't

The brand is cruelty-free, but its parent company tests. Listed near the back so you can decide.

Not certified

Says it's cruelty-free, or there's no evidence either way, but no independent scheme has checked it. Listed at the back.

Certified means checked by Leaping Bunny / Cruelty Free International or PETA. Not in here: brands that test on animals, or sell where it's legally required. Look any brand up, or scan a barcode, at ahomekind.com.

WORTH KNOWING

When the owner isn't.

These 60 brands are cruelty-free themselves, but the company that owns them tests on animals. Buying them is still better than buying a tested brand. Where your money ends up is your call.

Not certified.

These 204 brands aren't certified by Leaping Bunny / Cruelty Free International or PETA. Some say they're cruelty-free; for others there's no evidence either way. Until one of those schemes checks them, a home kind can't call them cruelty-free.

WHY CERTIFIED

Why only certified brands?

Anyone can print "cruelty-free" on a pack. There's no UK law defining it, so the word on its own doesn't mean anyone has checked.

Certification is how you know. Leaping Bunny / Cruelty Free International and PETA check the brand's whole supply chain, and getting listed costs a brand nothing.

So if a brand isn't certified, it isn't on the cruelty-free pages here, however kind its marketing sounds. You'd be taking their word for it.

Not on the list?

Search any brand, or scan the barcode while you're in the shop.

ahomekind.com

A new edition every month.

Brands are added and rechecked all the time. The latest list always lives at the same link.
